Why IFIO?

The IFIO™ Basic Training is a 72-hour, practice-oriented clinical training for IFS Level 1 graduates who work as couple therapists and wish to incorporate the depth of IFS work into their work with couples and intimate partnerships.

The foundation is the IFS model, expanded with insights from systemic thinking and neuroscience. The training was developed for the complexity of relational work. IFIO is based on a simple, powerful idea: Intimate relationships are not just a context for healing—they are a vehicle for it. Instead of working with each partner individually, IFIO invites therapists to work with the relational system itself and to guide couples from conflict and distance toward genuine reconciliation and growth.

Therapists leave this training with embodied, practical tools that they can immediately use to:

- To enable effective relational work with couples and intimate partners.
- To overcome typical challenges in couples therapy with greater confidence and clarity.
- to skillfully work with extreme protective mechanisms and to integrate both interpersonal and intrapsychic processes.
- To support couples in communicating more effectively and deepening their heartfelt connection.

PARTICIPANTS REPORT ON

- More safety when working with couples in conflict
- Tools for supporting individuals through attachment disorders and breaches of trust
- A clearer approach to dealing with extreme protection dynamics in partners:
- deepened therapeutic alliance with both partners
- more depth and clarity in relational work
- integrated work with interpersonal and intrapsychic processes

RESEARCH

IFS is an internationally established therapy and counseling model with a growing research base. Its effectiveness has been investigated in clinical trials for over two decades. Buys (2025, Scoping Review, 27 studies) classifies IFS as a "promising therapeutic approach" for chronic pain, depression, and PTSD. In January 2026, the first full randomized controlled trial on IFS for PTSD was published by Joss et al. (Cambridge Health Alliance / Harvard, Psychological Trauma). IFIO adapts this approach to couples therapy by offering an IFS-based model for working with couples.

Trainers

JOYA LONSDALE

Joya Lonsdale, LICSW, is a bilingual psychotherapist (English/Spanish) and co-lead trainer for Intimacy From the Inside Out (IFIO) – the IFS-based treatment model for couples therapy. She has been working as an IFS therapist since 2012, joined the core IFIO trainer team in 2023, and has advanced training in all specialized IFIO modules: Betrayal & Repair, Shame and the Brain, and Sexuality Matters.

Her clinical focus is on treating couples with complex attachment and trauma dynamics – interethnic and intercultural couples, LGBTQIA+ couples, and heterosexual couples with a history of trauma. Additional qualifications in EMDR and Sensorimotor Psychotherapy complement her trauma- and body-sensitive work within the IFS framework.

"I have learned the most about IFIO as a client. I am passionate about supporting people in expanding their capacity to give and receive love and to communicate from the heart – using the same transformative model that helped my husband and me heal our relationship."

KRISSY TINGLE

Krissy Tingle is a certified IFS therapist and co-lead trainer for Intimacy From the Inside Out (IFIO). For over 25 years, her clinical focus has been on the treatment of relational disorders—attachment dynamics, the regulation of closeness and distance, and the impact of early relationship experiences on current couple dynamics. The integration of IFIO into her therapeutic work has methodologically deepened and broadened this focus.

Krissy completed her IFS and IFIO training starting in 2010 and is a founding member of IFS UK. Further training in Hakomi/Mindful Somatic Psychotherapy complements her body- and attachment-sensitive approach. She is a BACP member and runs a private practice in northwest England.

"IFIO has enabled those parts of me that had remained hidden due to hurtful relationships to be truly perceived and seen for the first time – and thus finally opened the door to reconciliation and acceptance."
